- For people interested in Buy Nothing: <https://bnponfb.org/find-a-group/> There's an app now but many groups still use Facebook.
- This is an awesome old dog marketing campaign: <https://www.riverfronttimes.com/stlouis/adopt-a-grown-ass-adult-dog-apa-of-st-louis-urges/>
- Maddie's Pet Assistant is a mobile app that provides health and behavioral advice based on adopter/foster answers to survey questions <https://pethealth.force.com/petassistant/s/>.

Session One:

Lindsay Hamrick, CPDT and Director of Shelter Outreach & Engagement for the HSUS, will discuss the challenges with restricting shelter pets from living in homes with resident pets and how this impacts length of stay. She'll highlight how to better support potential adopters in slowly and safely introducing shelter pets into their homes so that pets can leave more quickly. Tips in this presentation can also apply to owners who are struggling with conflict between resident pets in an effort to keep pets in their existing homes when possible. This presentation will not focus on severe dog-dog aggression or pets with a history of seriously harming other animals.

Step 1: In-shelter support and training

BEHAVIOR TRACKING

- What is the pet's history really (if they have one).
- Remove policies that say pets who didn't get along with one animal can't live with any animals.
- Track reactivity objectively in the shelter environment.
- Consult with a veterinarian regarding the use of medications.

TRAINING

- Crate training/crate in kennel (dogs)
- "Look" and/or "Come" for treats (cats and dogs)

EQUIPMENT

- Train to a basket muzzle (dogs)
- Train to a gentle leader (dogs)
- Desensitize to dragging a leash

HOUSING

- Minimize the frequency of unmanaged animal reactivity in shelter.
- Take advantage of opportunities to teach a "look" command when other animals are near.

how we market highly adoptable or shy cats

11:20:33 From Bobby Mann to Everyone:

we should find all the first time speakers from expo and invite them

11:20:39 From Bobby Mann to Everyone:

and then do the same for best friends

11:21:08 From Maria Saucedo - PFL to Everyone:

There's an Expo Facebook page I think where that could be posted 11:21:45 From Amber Freiwald, Maddie's to Everyone:

Great idea @Maria!

11:22:59 From Jess Roper to Everyone:

In my experience, most adopters without other pets still expect that their pet will interact with other animals

11:24:31 From Alex Hedgecock to Everyone:

I worry that the pet restrictions in the rabbit rescue community reduces adoptability. I'm working on solutions now.

11:25:00 From Amanda Gray to Everyone:

lol well said! good point. the exact match matters!

11:25:16 From PJ Rosch to Everyone:

Omg, I love the quote "the other dog was an asshole" I literally laughed out loud

11:25:36 From Jess Roper to Everyone:

Environment is everything!

11:25:54 From Kelly Duer to Everyone:

I love this conversation. My question is about the apparent lack of adopters for pets that are restricted. If about 25% of Americans don't have other pets, that is over 80 million people. Do you think part of the issue may also be how we market some pets who have restrictions?

11:26:59 From Jess Roper to Everyone:

@Kelly, I think marketing is part of it, but a lot of adopters I've worked with who had no other pets still, for instance, wanted to bring their new pet to family gatherings with other pets, anticipated living with or visiting friends/family with other pets, or want to take their pet to social settings like a group hike, dog park, brewery, etc.

11:27:07 From Sharon @MaddieFund to Everyone:

Yes, Kelly Duer - we have to extend our marketing to include the "entire" community. Get word out of our own bubble

11:27:58 From Sharon @MaddieFund to Everyone:

Yes @Jess Roper - that is so true. As they see them as family members

11:28:59 From Maria Saucedo - PFL to Everyone:

american PETS ALIVE!

11:34:44 From Tracy Hanson to Everyone:

how can this be scaled down to 100% foster based rescues who have cats that "don't get along with others" or we don't know their past and are trying to figure out does this animal in fact need to be only cat home or are there steps like these that we can have our fosters implement and work on? for example we have a litter of 5 juvenile cats who weren't socialized in that delicate time frame so they've been in foster home since November and foster can't even pet or touch 4 of 5 of them. how do we help these kitties so they can be adopted?

11:34:49 From Kim White to Everyone:

Our gentle leader (Halti brand) was the only thing that kept my huge block head dog, Annie, from pulling me off my feet

11:35:02 From Irene Chansawang to Everyone:

I love the gentle leader, too! Worked great on my first dog who was 80 lb.

11:35:10 From Alex Hedgecock to Everyone:

I have been working on a design to reduce the cost of animal shelter buildings, increase sustainability and increase the animals access to the outdoors and to each other for socialization. Its less effective in urban environments unfortunately. I'm still working through some kinks in the design.

That's a very interesting idea to have volunteers continue to assist post-adoption!

11:46:18 From Jess Roper to Everyone:

I also love this focus on adoption support. If we want to place more animals, we have to dedicate resources to helping adopters succeed. Using volunteers to help is a super smart idea.
